Deep within the dense forests of Amazonia travels a tribe like no other – a whispering among the leaves, gentle tread of lightly clad feet passing through the woodlands.

To those who venture into these gold-filled lands these soft murmurings change into thudding steps before the ground itself begins to shake.

The Re'moa have allied into tribes of ogres who in turn have the ears of several giants, often solitary, are still lured by gold to fight against those who trespass.

While Queen Ap'thia resides in the tribes travelling capital, Princess Im'mata of the Re'moa stands at the head of this taskforce, aided by the mystic Shala whose ethereal garb is glanced dashing across the canopy with barely a whisper.

Many hunt through the foliage for riches and many are sent to recover these missing adventurers, often disappearing without a trace...
